Hello world

<cite>CNN)</cite>It's a long-agonized-over machine recount total delivered two minutes too late.

But there's nothing ironic about it — this is, after all, Florida's Broward County, which has been plagued with issues in its vote-counting efforts for years.

Given that history, it was unsurprising — but still galling to volunteers — when the director of elections here revealed that the county had submitted its machine recount data two minutes after the state-mandated 3 p.m. Thursday deadline.