Random Lovely Thing: Pebbles on the Table

I love this idea of having natural river pebble hot pads. You can find these lovelies at Viva Terra (here and here), but I also think this can be a lovely (and easy) DIY project! I will be collecting my pebbles soon.

 A multi-panel diagram for a hair tutorial. The top panel shows a woman's hair from the back with arrows pointing to the sides and the text "leave space here". The middle panel has the text "pull one piece from each side and join them together using a clear elastic." The bottom panel shows a woman's hair with a ponytail being teased, with the text "tease this pony tail. (it will be your 'stuffing')".

Hair Inspiration & DIY: Romantic Updo

I've always loved the half and half updo. I think it's very romantic and flattering, but also easy to make. It's an elegant hairstyle, without trying too hard to be one. This step by step tutorial from Martha Stewart Weddings may be helpful.

A clash of the unconventional and the old-fashioned, I am forever curious and always at work. All the time in the world will not give me enough time to do all the things I love ... but I always stop by to smell the roses. I live for love, beauty and understanding. I dream big, keep it honest and make the minutes count.

Step 1: Dry your hair and create loose curls, from the ears down. You can use a large-barrel curling iron. (If your hair can't really hold curls, use some leave-in product for extra hold.)

Step 2: Run your fingers through the curls to loosen and separate them.

Step 3: Spray your roots with hairspray, starting halfway down the part and finishing at the crown.

Step 4: Tease the sprayed hair with a fine-tooth comb, in order to create height and volume.

Step 5: Use a soft brush to smooth the teased hair and then gather the sides into a ponytail.

Step 6: Secure the sides in place, using pins. Shape the curls with your fingers. Use a hairspray to smooth out the whole look and give it extra lasting powers. (Martha Stewart Weddings recommend John Frieda's Frizz-Ease 100% Shine Gloss Mist.)

Hair Inspiration & DIY: Easy Chignon Updo

Stylist Michael Angelo shows an easy-to-do chignon for Daily Candy. This look was specifically recommended for a wedding day, but I think it could be perfect for any day or event. I love the relaxed, casual feel of this look (so that rain or heat will not bother you). More good news? It's super easy to do at home!

Step 1: Make a ponytail after you've dried your hair. Hair doesn't have to be perfectly smooth or straight. This look is going for beachy summer feel, so some curls and volume are desirable.

Step 2: Divide the hair in the ponytail onto two sections. You can put some product on each section for extra hold. Twist the hair slightly and then push slightly towards the roots, for extra volume.

Step 3: Wrap the two sections in opposite directions (one after the other). Secure in place with bobby pins and voilà! A lovely chignon!

See the video clip for the full tutorial.
